

Operations of a For-Profit Newspaper

Why would the Houston Chronicle, the Austin American-Statesman, and the Dallas Morning News print and distribute a special edition to homes in your area?

They would only do this if they had advertisers willing and wanting to pay for the printing and distribution costs. Plain business decision.

Many over the years have studied the LINK Letter and its business model: offer candidates advertising space at a cost-effective rate to reach known Republican Primary Voters.

My friend, I will defend your right to prepare a sample ballot for your area. I will even defend your right to endorse the candidates of your choice. Great minds will differ.

On my sample ballots are probably candidates that you will vote for, or have voted for. I probably have made every one mad at one time or another because I did not endorse their favorite candidate.

It is against the law to offer inducement (payment) for an endorsement. Candidates cross the line when offering to buy an advertisement in exchange for my endorsement. This is a two-way street.

When you state pay-to-play or words with the same meaning, you are accusing all endorsed candidates of offering the LINK Letter bribes.

Lies fly faster than the truth.
